Anything about fermentation to share?

The sixth step of Distillation, consists of refining the true self.

The sixth step of Distillation, consists of refining the true self.

Just as water is distilled to remove impurities, the stage of Distillation purifies our consciousness and frees us from linear perceptions of past and future.

Because our energies have been cleared and cleared, Distillation prepares us for the entry of the higher personal and universal forces that will ultimately conjoin with the lower ones to bring wholeness.

When you become distilled, you are grounded in both the earthly and spiritual worlds simultaneously. You have matured, no longer expecting life to meet egoistic expectations, and have released belief in negative self-regard.

You live in the present moment, not worrying about past mistakes or future possibilities. We are conditioned to anticipate the future or regret our past.

Distillation requires the sacrifice of fear in favor of becoming spiritually unified and benefiting the greater good.

Distillation must be experienced over and over until we are completely refined in the purest state of consciousness.

Cooperation of all of our aspects has become a natural way of being.

Becoming completely distilled requires deep and repetitive review of our beliefs, such as low self-worth.

The necessity of repetition in this stage is to guarantee full and complete purification of consciousness.

We may slip back and forth between the ego's influence and the distilled state. When complete, our distilled self is equally present with both earthly and heavenly realities.

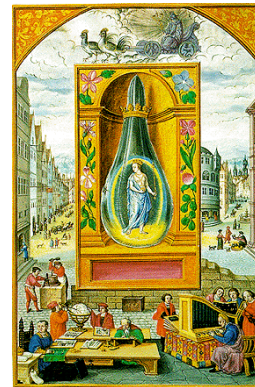

The Distillation process challenges us to not be drawn into negative thought or action. Any negative belief draws energy out of positive (vibrant life force expression) and prevents authentic distillation from occurring.

Our bodies may express this energy leak through exhaustion, our emotions may overwhelm us, and our problems may seem insurmountable.

We may tend to reach out to others for security during this disorienting time, but being rescued during this process is the last thing we need—it pulls us away from what we are being taught.

Distillation frees our creativity and connects us deeply with the Divine aspects of ourselves. It heralds the entry of the influence of the higher forces and the balancing of those forces with the lower ones.

This provides groundedness, an essential key to wholeness.

Though we must face and overcome various obstacles on the path, by the time we are fully engaged with the Distillation process we have matured emotionally and spiritually, so we are not undone or devastated when we meet new experiences that shock or surprise us.

A distilled person has surrendered expectations and thus is not disappointed when life isn't what he or she might have wanted before Distillation. The distilled person knows the ego no longer controls his or her life and refers to the Soul for guidance, understanding, and inspiration.

In alchemical lore, the process of Distillation was invented by Maria Prophetissa, the Jewish alchemist and female counterpart of Hermes. She instructs us to merge the waters of the Above and Below in Distillation.

Private session experience of past story and future story contributing to ungroundedness and not being embodied.

Exercise to pull in story.

Exercise to pull in creation threads to be in the present moment and integrated.

what's
story?

One of the taro cards showing Distillation is the High Priestess. She represents the esoteric soul of the alchemist, her intuition and the Mercury of her being.

Connect to your High Priest/ess self. Ask her what you need to distill internally at this time.

When you become distilled, you are grounded in both the earthly and spiritual worlds simultaneously.

In what ways do you need to integrate the two worlds further in your creations in any area of life and/or business?

What needs to be distilled in terms of your money/financial creations?

What needs to be distilled in terms of your business creations?

What needs to be distilled in terms of your personal leadership and creation desires?

What needs to be distilled in terms of your personal fulfillment desires?
